See regex101.com to try it out. In your example, this translates to: `if (t.find("\w{1,4}")) { found = true; }` If you want it to match just printable characters (i.e. not all the non-breaking spaces, tabs and others), you can use this regex: `\p{ASCII}` The `\p{ASCII}` matches any printable ASCII character. But as jaypal just said, you probably want to use a raw string, since you already have the string inside the class. `if (t.matches("^\\p{ASCII}*"))` [See As the coronavirus pandemic sweeps through Australia, the government has made the financial contributions to businesses whose workers have been affected by Covid-19 mandatory. The assistance, which covers four months of payroll, is available to businesses with 250 or more employees in Australia, and includes sickness and redundancy payments. In a statement on Wednesday, Prime Minister Scott Morrison said the government was working to "get Australians back to work as quickly as possible". "The Government is providing immediate assistance, including to businesses with 250 or more employees," he said. "This covers four months' payroll and provides access to a range of other government services to ensure companies can pay employees, provide essential services, and cover other important expenses." The government expects $70 billion of unemployment benefits will be available to support around two million Australians. Businesses that require support to remain open during the crisis, including telecommuting, are eligible for support from the Government of Australia.
