It was released in Japan on June 11, 2008 by Toy's Factory, on September 30, 2008 in North America by Dramatico and on October 27, 2008 in Europe by SPV. The album is a departure from their previous albums, with more of a straight pop sound, however with a few exceptions. The album is much darker and moodier, with more political and social themes. For example, on "U.N.I.T.A.L.I.V.E.", there is a song that is supposed to be about a 'gangsta', however the song has many different meanings: at the beginning of the song, the singer uses the word 'gangsta' in a derogatory way, saying that he is a "pimped out thug", but then the next part of the song discusses the reason why he is so corrupt, and that he would not change for the world. The album charted at #67 on the Oricon Chart. Track listing Luminary (Luminary) U.N.I.T.A.L.I.V.E.
