I've built a simple app with a Tab Bar Controller and a Page Controller and have been using the Main.storyboard template, but now I want to start an app that will include my own start page. Is there an "official" Xcode template for a start page for a Universal app with a Tab Bar Controller and Page Controller? A: Yes, Xcode 9 has a new template for UWP that is integrated with Windows 10. For example, here is the template itself in the file structure: Template.xcworkspace/ Documents/ StartPage.xaml Resources/ StartPage.xaml.cs StartupUri/ App.xaml You can follow this blog for more details. 'd better be carrying an umbrella, though. Hot day, and at 6am, before the sun had really had a chance to warm things up. This isn't a 'Teahupoo' post (I'm trying not to use the word 'Boiling' too much in these...), but it does involve some sunlight. A thermal pool you can bathe in. The view of the park from Teahupoo The views from Teahupoo are pretty spectacular. This is the view from the carpark up at the top of the reserve. And here's the view from the carpark in the lagoon. The name of the park, Teahupoo comes from the Maori term for a hole in the ground where a (sometimes flaming) 'ko' (pot) was left in the hope that it would catch fire, and warn people of the fact that the forest around the hole was inhabited by certain flying rats. I had to investigate further. The history of Teahupoo is in fact much more complicated than that. The more than 3,000 Maori who lived in the area, and later in the 19th century, were
