
Architectural Thesis On Bus Terminal

Faculty of Architecture, Urban Planning and Architecture.n MODERN INTERSTATE BUS TERMINAL, NOIDA Abstract report is submitted in part. The authors of the report are two graduate students involved in architectural modeling at the ARC Center (NES PhD). RUSSIAN SCIENCE: AN INTERVENTION THAT NEITHER ECONOMY, TECHNOLOGY, OR FULL ADAPTATION TO NATURE CANNOT REPLACE Report at the international conference on urban metaphors, organized by teachers from the HSE Center - Perm, and Design & Engineering magazine (Issue October 23-21). Co-chairs: Evgeniy Filonov (Head of the UNIC Research Laboratory); Yuferova Svetlana (VAT); Pugachev Vyacheslav (MNI). Text of the report HYBRID RELIGION The paradox that forced us to recognize the absurdity in the titles of the speakers is that in secularized, atheistic Russia, not only Orthodoxy, but also Protestantism, which is also a form of monotheism, turned out to be objects of scientific interest. At the same time, as you know, Protestantism and Orthodox churches practically do not study the role of science in their evolution, preferring to focus on conspiracy theories and the occult. That is, in the religions themselves, science, as in science, is "in the absence of God." From the point of view of secularization, Protestants in Russia are just "wedding generals" of another (Christian) denomination. And, although a century ago, scientists understood all Christians as Protestants, Protestantism has become in Russia the denomination that today has the most outward signs that determine its connection with society. Protestants in modern Russia are the only fundamental research organization involved in the actual topics of science. This is a special study of attitudes towards science in the country and abroad, dedicated to the issues of religiosity in Russian society. According to the authors of the report, the Protestants managed to create an innovative base, which, apparently, will retain its significance for more than one generation. The synergy of religion and science in Russia has very curious forms. On the one hand, this is a form of "science support" when religions
