Download Double File Scanner software for free from Softonic: UnitedHealth Group Arena The 2014 UnitedHealth Group Arena, also known as the XL Center or the Pepsi Center, was a home ice venue of the National Hockey League (NHL)'s St. Louis Blues, the National Basketball Association (NBA)'s Minnesota Timberwolves and the WNBA's Minnesota Lynx from August 7, 2014 through April 9, 2015. The arena is located in the Uptown district of St. Louis, Missouri, US. It has a capacity of 20,190, making it the fifth-largest professional sports arena in the United States as well as the largest arena built since the 2004 reopening of the Milwaukee Arena. The facility is named after UnitedHealth Group, the owners of the St. Louis Blues. History Construction of the arena was announced in September 2008, and the groundbreaking ceremony was on April 24, 2011, on a site overlooking the Mississippi River. The city's civic leaders had been pursuing the site for several years, and had tapped Delos Corporation's Ramsey, Minnesota land, but Delos decided to sell the site to the city. Due to the relocation and enlargement of the adjacent MidAmerica Arena, the facility was moved one mile west in May 2013. Phase I of the arena project was completed on August 16, 2013, with a ribbon-cutting ceremony attended by residents and more than a million fans. Phase II of the renovation, which was completed in time for the NHL and NBA seasons, included a new concourse and concessions area along with a $17.6 million upgrade to the arena's ice-making equipment. A Duplicate Scanner (Mac OS X) Find more Duplicate File Scanner reviews 10. filesharing – Filesharing is the action of sharing files. While in most cases its use is restricted to peer-to-peer network communications and its origin is the word sharing. In its first sense, the term was coined by Bruce Brown and used in an article published on 11 December 1996 in ZDNet. Its spelling with a lowercase share was coined by Randall Strossen, a well known open source developer and advocate. Strossen was going to write an article on providing open source licenses to software, the article was going to be about combining the licenses of the Tivoization, Final Cut, DVD authoring, audio and video formats as well as the file format. He wanted to have this work be released under the CC0 license for all the formats. This work became the Sharing Source project which is the one of the first collaborative open source projects. The project aimed to study the situation of sharing, the idea was that I had this huge collection of files and media and I was going to make use of them in the way I liked.
