I think you can only be bullied if you are being picked on, and it was not in any way pick on your for her looks. "It's no good to blame people because you were made to feel uncomfortable and were never happy for her." Now we have a new poll from YouGov asking: "What do you think of the 7-year-old girl who was teased at her primary school because she had red hair?" And some of the comments are really quite interesting: Rachel Stowbridge, 35, from Leicester, is surprised that anyone would tease someone who was so young: "She looks like a ginger poppet, you're just jealous." Michael Knight, 43, from Hull, thinks people should be allowed to wear whatever clothes they want: "She looked nice in the red jumper, my three year old has been to school in dresses and shoes that would look acceptable in a nightclub. That's ridiculous." Even the queen herself responded to the poll: "I think that they should be allowed to wear whatever colour and length of hair they like - especially as the world is changing so quickly. And there's no need to have a bob at this age. Maybe a bit more on the back and sides and less on top? "People used to be able to express themselves much more and be more relaxed about what they wore. When I was a little girl, my hair was always coiffed into such a style that it was never my choice - I wanted to be a hippie or something - and I think that's a shame. "I have never thought about her - I was too busy with much more important things to worry about."
