The application sports an intuitive interface and comes with well-organized menus and useful wizards. Before actually backing up your files, you will see a splash screen that requires you to check all your files and folders and backup your data as you specified. Still, you can preview the results of the backup process after performing manual or scheduled backups. In order to view detailed backup results, you need to access the 'Task Related information' window. Another feature worth mentioning is the restoring data, which is a vital option in these kinds of applications. The process of restoring data is very similar when deleting data using the icons along the top of the screen. Moreover, when backing up important data, you need to specify a new folder location, which can be a network folder as well. By using Samsung Auto Backup you have the possibility to connect to a new network folder by changing the connection type and specifying the shortcut name.
