Lionsgate Films has acquired U.S. distribution rights to the animated comedy show "Dragon Blade," which premiered in Japan last month and comes with English subtitles. "Dragon Blade," which has been broadcast in Japan for more than seven years, runs on NHK's "Kamen Rider" label and is distributed by Enterbrain. It boasts more than 5 million subscribers and has been the top-rated children's program on the network for the past three years in a row. Hiroko Kasai ("Tantei Opera Milky Holmes") wrote and directed the series with Shinji Aramaki ("Dragonball Z," "Mobile Suit Gundam: Iron-Blooded Orphans"). It features an ensemble cast that includes the voice talents of Norio Wakamoto ("Yu-Gi-Oh!"), Mamiko Noto ("Fullmetal Alchemist") and Tetsuya Kakihara ("One Piece"). Lionsgate acquired "Dragon Blade" after it was included in sales at the Tokyo Market last December. It will start releasing it in Japan in July. Lionsgate released "Dragon Blade" in Japan in 2013, where it became the highest-grossing series this year with 1.6 billion yen (about $13 million) in domestic box office receipts. Outside Japan, "Dragon Blade" has been airing on local stations in China, Korea, Taiwan, Thailand, Malaysia and Vietnam. It is still airing in Bangladesh, and is set to air in Peru and Chile, among other countries, in the near future. I never thought writing a fanfiction would be this much fun, but I get a kick out of writing haikus when I'm stressed. This is for my good friend Herringgirl, who's my equal and my friend too.
