As part of a program to monitor community-acquired pneumonia in infants, all chest radiographs obtained from infants aged less than or equal to 2 months in Lima were collected during a 3-month period in 1987. The radiographs were read by two pediatricians with certification by the Peruvian Society of Pediatrics as having studied radiologic technique in Lima, who classified them according to criteria modified from those of the American Pediatric Society. Of the 1465 radiographs reviewed, 777 (53.2%) were classified as normal, 239 (15.9%) as suggestive of community-acquired pneumonia, and 444

Passage of the bill would mark the first time in a generation that Republicans have managed to both pass a major piece of legislation and achieve their original goal of repealing and replacing the Affordable Care Act, and it would coincide with the 40th anniversary of the first Republican-controlled Congress. The Senate approved a Republican-only version of a repeal bill last month, but only a narrow 52-48 margin, leaving it unclear whether the party could muster the support needed to send it to President Donald Trump for his signature. Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell postponed a vote on the House version last week after two Republicans in his caucus sided with Democrats to oppose a motion to proceed on the legislation. But on Thursday, House GOP leaders filed a resolution to suspend House rules so they can vote on their version of the repeal bill. The vote would come just hours after the Senate rejected a last-ditch attempt by Majority Leader Mitch McConnell to repeal the health care law with only GOP votes. During a
