The popularity of AutoCAD has helped the application to become one of the most widely used programs in the world. There are over 16 million installations of AutoCAD. In 2012, AutoCAD had over $1 billion in annual revenue. AutoCAD is considered by most CAD professionals to be the best available CAD app on the market, having been named one of the Best Operating Systems of 2013 and the Best Autodesk Software of 2015. AutoCAD comes with a series of applications on the subscription license. These include AutoCAD, AutoCAD LT, AutoCAD Web, AutoCAD Mobile, AutoCAD Map 3D, DraftSight, and AutoCAD Map 3D Viewer. In addition, there are other Add-On applications such as Blocks, 3D Architectural Modeling, DWG Components, 3D User Interface, and others. The last version of AutoCAD LT (formerly AutoCAD XP) was released in 2014. The next version, AutoCAD 2020, was released in September 2019. AutoCAD LT 2020 is not backward compatible with the older AutoCAD LT 2010 (because of the number of changes made since 2010). AutoCAD is still the world's most widely used architectural design software. It is the world's second most widely used CAD application after CATIA. Version history Version 1.0 was released in 1982. Q: Is it possible to batch modify/update records in a table? My question is similar to a request posted on stackoverflow, but since I don't have enough reputation to comment I'm posting it here. Is it possible to create an update statement that runs in a batch and/or does a quick check to see if all the records affected by the statement have a particular column value that has not changed? For example: I have a list of products that can be created. The name of each product is in the database, and it also has a type field. I want to create the products, but also check if the type of any of the records is changed. If it is changed then I want to update the row instead of creating a new one. A: You want to use either a cursor or a transaction. Once a cursor is open, then it can do a variety of things, including rows without an ID, where to next, etc. This is one of the things where it can help to open it and then batch stuff out. A transaction is just what it sounds like, a transaction. You can make changes to a set of records and "do them all at once" and if there is a problem at any point, you can roll back those changes. If you were to do a BEGIN TRANSACTION and a BEGIN TRAN without an explicit COMMIT or ROLLBACK at the end, this would be "unsafe". Do not do this. If you do any work before the transaction is committed, it will go through to commit (since no-one would be trying to roll back work). So you have a choice: If you are only making one change, then you can do it all in a single transaction. If you do many changes to
