Queen Caroline (1748–1827) Princess Caroline of Anspach (Caroline Amalie Friederike Maria Cecilie; 11 November 1748 – 27 June 1827) was the fourth surviving child and fourth daughter of Frederick V of the Palatinate and his wife Louise Henriette of Baden-Durlach. She was created Princess of Wales and Countess of Darlington on 26 June 1764. Life She was christened at the Chapel of Schloss Reußberg on 11 November 1748. Her godparents were her mother's first cousin Duke Charles Alexander of Württemberg and his wife Duchess Fredericka of Württemberg. Following the death of her older half-sister Marie Caroline, she became heir to the Palatinate. Marriage and issue On 5 March 1765, Caroline married her first cousin Albert II, Hereditary Prince of Saxe-Coburg-Saalfeld (1743–1816), son of Prince Ferdinand of Saxe-Coburg-Saalfeld (1713–1764) and his first wife Sophia Dorothea of Saxe-Gotha-Altenburg (1720–1780), daughter of Augustus III of Poland. Albert and Caroline never had any children together, but had five children with their second cousin, the Prince of Württemberg, Ernest I (1767–1816) who married Louisa Leopoldine von Dach (1770–1842), Countess of Urach and died without male issue leaving the Duchy of Urach and Nassau-Saarbrücken to his nephew, Duke Charles I Louis Frederick (1788–1834) and his male-line descendants. The Hereditary Prince was also a nephew of Queen Caroline Matilda of Great Britain, who was Caroline's older half-aunt. Her husband was the brother of her sister-in-law, princess Charlotte of Wales, whose marriage brought her, of right, the county of Darlington and the lands of Hildesheim and Schloss Altenluhe into the British royal family. Caroline therefore became a second cousin of Queen Caroline Matilda and Empress Alexandra Feodorovna and a third cousin of Queen Victoria. The princess Caroline lived together with her husband in England until her first husband died in 1771. They moved to Northern Germany and they spent their summers at the house

MONROE, La. — For more than a century, ex-hockey player and agent Wayne Landry has befriended and guided a succession of hockey talents in and out of an NHL career. So when his new puck-rolling, net-protecting client, the 24-year-old Chris Kreider, offered him a million dollars for a little advice, Landry was stunned. “I’m like, ‘What?’” Landry said Wednesday of the offer. “I was like ‘What do I say?’ I had never thought about any of that stuff.” Now Landry has. He’s become a subtle adviser and motivational teacher to Kreider, his oft-flamboyant client, all before Kreider’s second NHL goal — an overtime winner against the Vancouver Canucks in his NHL debut on Wednesday night. Landry calls Kreider “the smartest guy I know” and has often offered the advice to other Bruins, including former Swedish goaltender Jonas Gustavsson and this season’s first-round pick, Dougie Hamilton, who had been shuttled between two European teams before breaking into the NHL and getting sent to Hamilton’s wing on a line with Kreider on Wednesday. “We were talking about it after it happened,” Landry said Wednesday. “I was pretty shocked. He’s one of those guys that I enjoy watching on TV. But this is a whole different side of him. He’s kind of a guy I didn’t think I would ever see.” Landry said he was joking with Kreider after the overtime goal, asking him if he was keeping the million dollars. Landry said he didn’t want to jinx it but “I think he kind of did. He looked at me and started laughing. Then he said, ‘No, if I keep it, I’m not gonna be able to play here anymore.’ He thinks it’s kind of cool. But I didn’t think he was that kinda guy. He’s so smart, so calm, so kind of composed.” Landry said he also spent much of the season teaching Kreider the importance of taking care of his body, which Kreider has embraced. Kreider said he only started to focus on getting healthy
