Q: How does "your" relate to God in Philippians 2:5? Philippians 2:5 (ESV) But I want you to know, brethren, that the gospel that was preached by me is not of human origin. This verse is quoted in a lot of answers on other questions. I personally see a connection to "your" and the "one thing" Jesus was building up to, which is "us". But that doesn't really feel right. This seems like a simple translation, but I'm looking for a way to make this clear. A: Paul's use of "us" (hoi, plural, masculine) here is a contrast to "I" (ego, eimi, singular, feminine), and so the grammar of the Greek tense for "I" is feminine (ego eimi). Paul explicitly identifies "I" as "brother" (adelphoi, feminine), an identity that transcends his personal predicament in Philippi, and not as "Paul" (paulos, neuter). In keeping with their vow at the beginning of the letter to be "all things to [the Philippians]" (Phil. 2:17), Paul uses this kind of "we" identification in 1 Corinthians 13:1: "If I speak in the tongues of mortals and of angels, but do not have love, I am a noisy gong or a clanging cymbal." [The pronoun "I" still refers to the subject of the verb "have" (ei), and that subject is Paul, who is the first to respond to the question of 2:2 "why] were [you] labor[ing]?" It's something like "Brothers, I have labored in my ministry to build up your faith, but I make the following, a conclusion: I have labored as Paul has labored, "Paul wrote this letter in prison. It was he who did the labor. The verb in verse 5 is aorist, and so refers to the past, not the present. That's why it's a conclusion. He says [to them] the "gospel" preached by him is not "of [his] [own] origin." Rather, he presents what he said in 2:6, 6:2, and 6:4-8 as the gospel of Christ, which is not originally Paul's, but instead, the gospel
