Table of Contents The popularity of Photoshop and a desire to draw criticism from modern web designers and photographers, led to the development of an open-source alternative. This led to the creation of a number of companion or complementary programs, that make up the GIMP (GNU Image Manipulation Program) family. The three most widely used programs are GIMP, Photoshop Elements, and Paint.net. The original GIMP was released in 1997. Photoshop Elements is a more recent, commercial version released in 2002. Elements is a GUI version of the GIMP, with fewer features. It is often used as a compliment to the more complex GIMP, or as a replacement for a simple editing program like Paint.net. For some users, Elements is a fully capable, complete Photoshop replacement and for others, it is an effective, more user-friendly program. This article will cover the features of all three programs, and when one is more appropriate than the other in a given situation. Downloads

Introduction: If you have used any version of Photoshop, you will find it easy to move from Elements to Photoshop. Photoshop is a professional graphics editing application. Elements is somewhat similar to Paint.net, but is based on the GIMP (GNU Image Manipulation Program). The more complex GIMP is a free, open source alternative to Photoshop. The GIMP's features are much wider than Paint.net's, but includes support for layers and other advanced features. Photoshop Elements 12 / 15 / GIMP 2.10.12

The term "a-b-c" means "one" "a" plus one "b" plus one "c". In this example, the term is "one". A shorthand way of expressing this is "one + one + one". We use the term "1a1b1c" to mean "one plus one plus one", or "one plus one". This way of thinking of numbers is called positional notation, because a-b-c equals the position of each one in the expression 1a1b1c. So, 1a = 2, 1b = 1, 1c = 1. 2a1b1c = 11b. We can add, subtract, multiply, and divide numbers in this way. When we multiply two numbers, we could express them in the "1a1b1c" notation as "4a4b4c", for example.

Here is a trick question. Starting with the number (2) you are given the choice of three different number sets of numbers that add up to the same thing. Which would be the number closest to (2) in terms of distance? The answer is 1a1b1c. (For this and other exercises in this section, the numbers don't have to be consecutive - they could be 1a, 2a, 3a, 1b, 5a, 4b, 6b, and so on.) So, the correct answer is 1a1b1c.

Britons are waking up to find they are in an emergency, with some of the country's biggest employers bailing out of the North Sea oil industry amid spiralling production costs, writes Tim Reeve. The industry has experienced a downturn after the oil price collapsed from $50 (£30) a barrel in mid-2014 to just under $30 today. The latest wave of redundancies, affecting around 4,500 jobs, is part of a wave of closures that has caused 11,000 jobs to be lost. Many companies are bailing out of the industry, which has only been profitable since 2013 and was at the centre of the United Kingdom government's economic recovery plans. The latest round of job losses has been prompted by a slump in oil prices, falling oil rig numbers and the cost of work permits for foreign workers. It is the latest blow for an industry that suffered huge losses after the financial crisis and has
