Socialist academics and writers are fighting the 'war' for free speech in Israel. This is the second of a multi-part article. Read part 1 here. The Israeli left wants to end the country's long war against terror (Shir ha-shir ha-rah). But it can't have peace if the right wing gets its way. That is the goal of the "anti-anti-Semitism" campaigns waged by the left: taking the fight against real anti-Semitism outside Israel, and removing the excuse that Israel is alone in protecting itself against the threat. They want a one-state solution in which Zionism no longer exists. They hope to undermine Israel's ongoing war against Palestinian terrorists and the leaders who control them. Yet they can't beat the truth. Anti-Semitism is alive and well in Israel. Even the leftists who fight against it. How does the left justify this? Once Again: Israel is Protecting Its Citizens Anti-Semitism is a wide and deep phenomenon with a long history. But the left turns to an avowed anti-Semite to criticize Israel. This is because the left only understands nationalism, unlike the right, which understands ethnic nationalism. Nationalism, in contrast to ethnic nationalism, means that the nation has the right to self-defense. That is the only genuine justification for the state to exist. And there are plenty of open anti-Semites on the left. When Jodie Foster spoke on the red carpet
