This year’s player ratings are based on the new in-game analytics, including Player Impact Kicks, where players are rated based on their ability to impact the match and the statistical impact of their actions. The data is also used to determine potential ratings changes from last year. The EA SPORTS Football Club in FIFA 18 was the only way to track other players and earn rewards to improve your player. The EA SPORTS Football Club is back, and it’s more powerful than ever. With the latest season of the EA SPORTS Football Club, a new level of analytics are added to both gameplay and teams, including Player Rating, Player Impact Kicks, Key Profiles and Matchday Personality. Here’s what to expect from the FIFA 18 Club Season 3. Additional reward types are available depending on the level you finish in FIFA 18 Club As you move through the Club Season 3, you’ll earn points in addition to trophies which are earned by completing goals and challenges. The more you play, the more rewards you earn. You can also earn badges for level and Team of the Month, which will grant you valuable items that can help you improve your player. Additional rewards are unlocked depending on the level you reach in FIFA 18 Club. Experience points are earned every match you play, and you can combine them with medals and earn these rewards. Medals are earned for popular Challenges, where you can play to your skill level to earn the highest possible rating. You can also earn rewards every time you get a goal or assist with your Player of the Match profile. When you do, you’ll earn the FIFA Ultimate Team Feature you’ll see highlighted for a goal scored, pass completed or assist made. You can choose to use your reward as players, coins, or boost. As you develop your skills in FIFA 18 Club, you can use coins and boost to improve your player in a variety of ways. Coins can be used to purchase three packs of new skill items, boost your players ability to score or assist and improve your players stamina and attributes. Boosts are player-specific boosts that can be applied to unlock new boosts. You can apply player boosts to all-new Ultimate items and even make your Ultimate Coins, Boost Points, and Master Points.
