Kusić Kusić (,) is a village and a former settlement in the Brinje Municipality of the White Carniola area of southeastern Slovenia. It is now a part of the town of Brinje. The area was traditionally part of the Lower Carniola region. It is now included in the Southeast Slovenia Statistical Region. Name The name Kusić is believed to be of Slavic or German origin, and means 'with the birds'. Local dialect names include Wjek and Kjuc. History Kusić was a village inhabited by ethnic Germans that became known as the Vojtovci on the villages before the Second World War. During the Second World War, the village was burned in 1944. It was partly rebuilt after the war. References External links Kusić at Geopedia Category:Populated places in the Municipality of Brinje to the pledge each debtor must promise upon the execution of the instrument: "I will pay the full amount of my debt as agreed." Thus, the Bankruptcy Court properly calculated the total of the unsecured portion of the debt owed by each debtor (as of the filing of the bankruptcy petition) to be $100,000. 21 The Trustee argues that sec. 506(b) does not apply to unsecured debt, and that therefore the bankruptcy court erroneously awarded a second priority payment to each of the unsecured creditors. This argument is without merit. The plain language of section 506(b) speaks only to secured debt, and makes no reference to unsecured debt. However, the Trustee argues that allowing such a claim would be contrary to the purposes of Chapter 13, and would be detrimental to the bankruptcy process. In support of this claim, the Trustee argues that unsecured creditors would receive a windfall in the form of payment at the expense of more senior creditors, that secured creditors would bear the burden of paying a double claim, and that secured creditors would effectively share the risk of possible subsequent decline in property value. However, because this case is distinguishable from the other Chapter 13 cases in which we have addressed the issue, we need not decide the validity of the Trustee's conclusions.
