(2013/ENG) Q: How to add one route in Rails? I want to add routes to my routes.rb file but I can not find the correct route. I want this:

localhost:3000/users/user/edit/1 => some controller and method but I can't figure out the correct syntax. A: Add this into your routes.rb: resources :users, path: 'user/:id' It means, that the given route will be like your second example, but with the following path:

edit_user_path(@user) More examples:

Q: Jquery Alain: can't open content link in new window I am using the Jquery plugin Alain in an asp.net page. I have an event handler set up to open a new window (or blank page) when I click on a link that says "Close", "Content" or "Open". The link that I have set up looks like this:

A: Stop using Warez and Crack sites and get a legitimate copy of the software.. follow the instructions found at The problems with the trial version is that you can use it on only 2 PCs, and it is a trial. if your computer has no security, this is not a problem, but if it does, such as a screen locker or firewall, the trial version will fail when you try to use it.. the pirated copy will work and pass the activation code (Solve that, reboot, and the install will begin). there is no fix to the problem, the only way is to buy the full version. I have the full version and it works great. require 'rubygems' begin require 'fog/aws/polly_fog_config' rescue

Q: How do you build an HttpClient in ASP.NET Core for both client and server? Is there any way to build an HttpClient in ASP.NET Core in a fashion that it can be used both for clients and servers? I can't seem to find a way to do this... A: We built http client extensions for asp.net core. You can find them in the following repo Also the following blog post is very good
