Essentials of Photoshop CC Getting started Unlike its most popular competitor, GIMP, Photoshop has a steep learning curve. Photoshop can be intimidating to those who are not familiar with the concepts of layers, curves, masks, and path lengths. For this reason, it is recommended that you start out with a tutorial on basic editing for a given subject, a template, or a standard image that you intend to change the look of, such as a stock image or the image you wish to post on Flickr. If you are not familiar with Photoshop, you will find it much easier to get a feel for it if you start with a simple, flat image that you can mess around with before upgrading to more complex tasks such as fine detail work or product creation. At its simplest, you can do things such as crop, rotate, and use a few basic effects to alter the look of an image, as well as add in basic corrections (color, brightness, contrast, and the like). Once you have worked with a given image and feel comfortable with the basics, it is important to first start at a basic level and then advance from there. Related features There are a plethora of features that are available in Photoshop, but no matter what you do with your images, there are a few basic elements you need to know about: Color modes An image is just a collection of pixels. In computer terms, an RGB (red, green, blue) image is a collection of individual pixels that are organized into a specific color space. Each pixel in the image can be assigned a number that defines its red, green and blue values. A CMYK (cyan, magenta, yellow and black) image is similarly organized into specific color spaces. Colors can then be assigned to any pixel, either by manually setting each color to a pixel or by specifying specific hexadecimal values. When images are created, they are typically saved in a specific color mode, which defines how the RGB and CMYK pixels will be combined and arranged. There are four basic color modes, each of which produces specific results: RGB (Red, Green, Blue) It is the default color mode, and is used for editing images when no other mode is specified. An RGB image contains 3 separate grayscale images, each with its own color. Separating the pixels into 3 different colors means that you can manipulate each

BENGALURU: Logic told it had a market for wheat flour for the next three months. If logic could not do it, it called on the cosmic to help. With the end of the rains and the dry spell on the way, the company's market analysis said wheat production and the stocks was going to fall on yearly low. So logic went to the celestial for guidance.It would, as and when the atmosphere allows, continue to sell a tonne of wheat to its millers and such till Sept 30. Then the 2019 crop cycle, well into its second year, comes to an end. The company is booked for half a tonne. This despite the lesser number of acres to cultivate this year. "The weather in May was better than the entire month of June," says Harminder Grover, managing director, Jet Industries. Eager to seize the opportunity, Grover had booked a tonne of wheat from 1.5 million kgs in 2017 to nearly 2.5 million in the first four months of this year. But as fate would have it, it has been raining ever since the beginning of June. Eager to cash in on the situation, it has recently booked two million kgs worth Rs 4,000 crore in wheat contracts. Unlike the last time, this time Jet has made the deal with mills, both small and large. So it will get the best price for the quality of wheat it has, unlike the time when it was to keep away from the market and make money by hedging against the risk of low supply. "People go to temples for monetary welfare. Now, all the powerful gods have turned up to keep good rainfall for the next few months," says Harpal Singh, chairman, Indian Olive Oil Association. "There were low stocks of wheat in the past, which was supplemented by imports. Now, it's different. And, to be fair, though the demand is still there, the supply may not be. So some of the suppliers and the mills are making the most of the situation." Three things make Jet Industries different from other players in the space. First, it has the best wheat coming in from Punjab - a gift from the Asian monsoon. Second, it has about 30 mills with the smallest as small as 1,000 tonnes and as big as 100,000 tonnes of production capacity. Third, the company has built a large warehouse with 300,000 square feet of area for storing the wheat
