.Cholestyramine: Its Potential for the Treatment of Hyperlipidemia. Cholestyramine's benefits in controlling hyperlipidemia appear to be derived from its ability to reduce the absorption of dietary fat in chylomicron and very low density lipoprotein (VLDL) fractions. Cholestyramine's ability to produce fat malabsorption is related to its ability to chelate bile salts in the intestine, thereby preventing their reabsorption. Intestinal digestion of cholestyramine particles is slow and requires residence times in the intestine of greater than 4 days. Cholestyramine's ability to regulate cholesterol metabolism through competition for the absorption of other bile salts is related to its ability to induce fecal fat losses. Therefore, by inducing loss of fat-soluble vitamins, it may produce anemia and osteoporosis. Cholestyramine's limitation is its dose-related gastrointestinal symptoms and intolerance reactions. These symptoms should be managed symptomatically, such as with loperamide and emepronium. Shahar Rashed Shahar Rashed (, born November 14, 1996 in Iran) is an Iranian taekwondo athlete. At the 2012 Summer Olympics, he competed in the semi-finals by Milorad Čavić.
