Follow us on Twitter for the latest news! Q: Less than 2 GP in a month? Is this bad? I am 29 and only have ~$2k in my savings account as of today. I spent more than 1/2 my paycheck on bills last month, and have a student loan due to go into collection in a few months, so don't expect any good news on that front. I do however have a wife and 3 month old daughter, the former of whom is almost 2 and the youngest is 14 months. What would you suggest I do to make sure I still have enough money to survive financially for a few months if I have a household emergency? A: The main point of having savings is when a real emergency happens. In an emergency, your paycheck does not cover your basic expenses. This is what comes to mind: rent your car registration utilities food health insurance etc. In an emergency, I would suggest to keep a few days in your budget to pay for basic necessities (even if it is just for 5 days). That way, in case of emergency, you do not run out of money and are not forced to sell something to have the money necessary.

Expression of HLA-DQB1 antigen in rat trophoblast: regulation by interferon-gamma. We have shown previously that the expression of HLA class II antigens in rat trophoblast decreases after interferon-gamma treatment of spleen cells from rats of the PK and PVG lineages (referred to as PK-IFN and PVG-IFN), but not in cells from the BN line. The aim of the present study was to investigate the regulation of HLA-DQB1 expression by interferongamma in HLA class II negative rat trophoblast (RT-1b). The RT-1b cells were obtained by treatment of first trimester rat trophoblast with 1.5% pronase for 1 h. The trophoblast cells were then cultured for an additional 24 h in serum-free RPMI-1640 medium containing different concentrations of interferon-gamma. In untreated RT-1b cells the same 2 kb transcript was identified in comparison to PK-IFN and PVG-IFN spleen cells, while BN cells did not express this transcript, although the transcripts for DPB, DRB and DQA were present. In RT-1b cells, the treatment with interferon-gamma induced the expression of HLA-DQB1. This regulation was time-dependent; HLA-DQB1 was not induced after 10 h of culture, but after 24 h significant induction was observed. To determine if the induction of HLA-DQB1 by interferon-gamma is due to a gene activation in RT-1b cells, the methylation of the CpG dinucleotides of the promoter region of the DQB1 gene in untreated and interferon-gamma-treated RT-1b cells was examined. The untreated RT-1b cells did not show any CpG methylation. The treatment of RT-1b cells with interferon-gamma increased the methylation of the CpG dinucleotides. These results indicate that the interferon-gamma-dependent regulation of HLA-DQB1 is mediated by a gene activation in RT-1b cells.
