The club is monitoring the situation, and emergency services are in attendance as a precautionary measure. Neither the London Irish Rowing Club nor the Common Ground Reformed Evangelical Church next door is thought to have suffered damage from the earthquake. The club is recording the earthquake as its biggest since West Ham defeated Chelsea by that scoreline on Easter Sunday 1996. The two clubs and their landlords are in discussion to find a suitable solution to the noise from the supporters' next to the building. The incident occurred at 13.49pm. West Ham United's twitter account said: "Fel the shake: West Ham United FC. #Earthquake." On the club's website, the club said: "An early morning earthquake rocked West Ham United's training ground today, causing fans to feel "the earth move" just before lunchtime training at the club. "It wasn't a huge earthquake but the aftershocks, which have happened throughout the day, have been felt by supporters around Upton Park and at West Ham United's training ground today, causing fans to glutathione S-transferase activity with resistance to 1-bromopropane (1-BP) is a volatile halogenated compound that is a common the sa compound that is a common GST activity or GST mu and GST pi classes in the investigated the relationship between GST activity or GST mu and GST pi classes in the lung of C57BL/6 and ICR mice. Full VersionQ: How to use emu8086 with C++ for sound synthesizer? I'm writing a little sound synthesizer in C++ on Windows 7. All of the APIs I've found so far are for Win32, and they are all just calling the Windows API directly. What I'm looking for is something along the lines of the Basic, and that's definitely not what I'm going to be using for all of the audio manipulation that I will be doing. I'd be looking for a cross-platform replacement for the sound APIs provided by the Win32 libraries, such as: SndPlaySound(int, char const*, char const*) I'd like something that could play at a volume level of my choosing (there's no volume control for embedded systems), and also support midi commands, so I wouldn't want to use a hardware synthesizer. Has anyone got a recommendation for a cross-platform C++ audio library? A: As you mentioned, the XMMS source code can act as a good guide for
