In many cases, I tend to wrap a fixed data structure inside a class, which usually is then put into a std::map of some sort. A typical "wrapping class" might look like this:

template struct Wrapper { static const int NUM_TEMPLATE_ARGUMENTS = template_parameters; T arg[NUM_TEMPLATE_ARGUMENTS]; }; template const int Wrapper::NUM_TEMPLATE_ARGUMENTS; This is nice, because it allows me to write: #include #include "wrapper.h" int main() { Wrapper *my_string = new Wrapper{"hello there"}; std::map> map = { {"string_a", Wrapper{"string_b"}}, {"string_b", Wrapper{"string_c"}},
