A case of successful parental management of a child with generalized pustular psoriasis. Generalized pustular psoriasis is a rare chronic disorder characterized by recurrence of sterile pustules on the erythematous skin. We present a case of a 10-year-old boy with this rare condition who was successfully treated with topical corticosteroids and desensitizing agents. The mother dealt with this disease by applying cream on the affected areas while the father was instrumental in operating the handicapped son by massaging the affected areas regularly to stimulate a circulation in the affected body part. The mother was trained by the father to thoroughly massage the affected areas regularly. Though the mother has never suffered from this disease, she took excellent care of the child as the father did. Therefore, there was no report of recurrence or relapse for a long period of time after treatment.

ABUJA, NIGERIA—A military tribunal here on Monday found former army chief of staff Gen. Muhammadu Buhari not guilty in an attempt to intimidate him into stepping aside from the race for president, months after the junta abolished the post of civilian president. Mr. Buhari was acquitted of charges of corruption and obstruction of justice, but an appeal to a civilian court is anticipated. The verdict comes after weeks of intense pressure by Mr. Buhari's supporters who denounced the appeals court as a puppet of the presidency. The main allegation against Mr. Buhari was that he distributed a document purporting to show that President Goodluck Jonathan had previously prepared and approved plans for a state of emergency in his final days. Mr. Buhari said the document was a forgery. Mr. Buhari is a front-runner in the presidential race. His main challenger, former military ruler Gen. Sani Abacha, is in custody following an ill-fated attempt to flee the country as the military regime was crumbling in 1998. Gen. Buhari's acquittal in the military tribunal signals a loosening of the clamp on popular opposition to the civilian regime. A similar fact-finding commission concluded in October that Gen. Buhari had aided in the former civilian president's escape. Mr. Buhari has denied the allegations. © Copyright 2011 Associated Press. All rights reserved. get the following results from my test here. Totally disable :) -> the following error appear again Hmmm..... Cannot load DLL 'libtranscode.dll': Cannot find the specified module After a lot of digging and googleing i finally found that the function of libtranscode_dll.dll called "tCdIpDllAddDll" needs to be modify to add the transcode to the list of directories that.dll files can be loaded from (happen to be "/usr/lib/transcode/") Make sure that no other versions of transcode are installed (transcode is commonly called transcode2 here). So I download and remove all of them. Modify libtranscode_dll.dll itself to remove the "addllldir" entry. I didnt really know what i did at this point. So i reloaded the transcode package and go to the folder (/usr/local/lib) again. This time, the output is different to what i have in my test environment. (You can notice that the error was not appear again. $ sudo start-stop-daemon -S -K -q -b -p /home/em4nlo/video/ -a /usr/local/bin/transcode [sudo] password for em4nlo: Stopping transcode: /usr/local/bin/transcode Starting transcode: /usr/local/bin/transcode transcode: warning: cannot get property of non-object - line 0 ("/usr/local/bin/transcode") .... [sudo] password for em4nlo: Failed to open plugin. Exiting. Go to the package manager, and confirm that transcode is removed again. Dont forget that this make your system broken if you use other versions. I cant really know if this is a real issue or something people configured that can be happening. The only thing i know is it could happen to anyone using those libraries. Go and get the latest version of the libraries from here. Again, i cant really tell if this is a good solution or not. After all, the question is: would this be a problem using Debian, or OpenBSD, or
