Microsoft have provided us with the first full hands-on with "HyperMotion Technology," which will be featured in FIFA 22, and it's a whole new level of immersive and authentic gameplay. The world of football moves fast, and it's the pace of gameplay that FIFA 22 is set to deliver. Player footwork, body language and actions all play a significant role in the way the game is played, so speed and precision are of the utmost importance. FIFA 22 introduces "HyperMotion Technology" with the aim of delivering even more footwork, better tackles and improved player acceleration and player movement. It's a new level of immersion, with the players in the game reacting to every touch, and every action is clearly visible in-game. It's an enormous leap forward from FIFA 19, and the question on everyone's lips is: is the NBA 2K series being threatened? FIFA 22 is the first FIFA game to include "HyperMotion Technology" from IDEA Sports. It's an exclusive feature that only FIFA games will feature, and it uses data from 22 different players to generate a virtual player. Players are generated from the real-life data, and this improves all aspects of the game. From animations to improve player footwork, diving, tackling, turning and locomotion, the data allows players to produce a gamer's perfect game. What's more, real-life player data is used in-game, so you can see it, feel it and play with it; all thanks to FIFA 22 introducing "HyperMotion Technology." If you're experienced in "NBA 2K" and other similar basketball games, then you might notice that the hands are awkward and the controls are different. The same is true of FIFA 22. You can move the stick in all directions, but there isn't any sort of control scheme to allow you to refine movement. You're on a foot-by-foot basis, which takes a lot of the skill out of gameplay. AI also isn't always as intelligent as it should be. Players will often foul a player through the ball, while defending in a one-on-one situation. You're never going to have players blundering into the opposition

FIFA Ultimate Team is enhanced for FIFA 22 with more ways to build and manage your Ultimate Team. You can now create custom competitions and invite friends to play on your Xbox Live club to complete your Ultimate Team. The game mode also introduces the FIFA Points Tier rating system which rates an item based on its cost, value, rarity, and market value. For instance, a rare shirt with an extremely high market value may be given a high tier rating by the FUT system. FIFA Ultimate Team games will now use this rating system to determine what player cards and stickers you can add to your FIFA Ultimate Team. This means that a new way to build a team is needed by you. A new set of transfer cards has been introduced, designed to be more powerful and build a better team. Player cards and sticker cards can now be purchased using coins earned in FIFA Ultimate Team games, and they will also have a Tier rating system, similar to the FIFA Points Tier system. FUT also introduces an item level rating system. A higher level item will give you more XP, coins, FIFA Points, and FUT Premium Credits. FUT also introduces a new feature named Draft Champions that gives you a chance to get more powerful player cards based on players from real life. PES 2016 Cover athlete Henrikh Mkhitaryan is available as a free player for all users, whilst La Liga, Chinese Super League, and NFL cover athletes are available in a pack that costs £2.99. Online In addition to local multiplayer modes, a new online mode dubbed Leagues will be playable for the first time. Leagues combines the stats and attributes of online player together on one leader board. Players can participate in anything from a casual 7 v 7 game to a league where they earn FIFA points as they progress through the game. Players will also have the option to take part in themed tournaments each week with points corresponding to each division.
